CITY'S ASSESSMENT INCREASED MORE THAN $1,000,000

Personal Property and Merchants' Ad Valorem Tax Show Gains—Total Assessment $135,888,000.

The total city tax assessed valuation for taxes for the current year shows $135,888,000, according to figures quoted by T. G. Scarborough, city tax assessor, in a communication addressed Monday to Mayor F. L. Monteverde, and the other city commissioners. This is an increase in assessment over last year of $1,044,730.

An increase of nearly a million dollars in personal property valuations, and more than a half million in merchants' ad valorem tax, is noted in the communication, which follows:

"Final appraisement of all classes of taxable property, as handled by the city assessor for 1935 assessment purposes, has been completed, with valuations as follows:

"Real estate, $97,175,910.
"Personal property, $11,874,327.
"Merchants' ad valorem, $10,478,860.
"Total, $119,529,107.

Added to the total above will be the assessed value of properties of the railroad, railroad bridge, company, street car company, gas and electric company and the telephone and telegraph companies to be rendered by the state railroad and public utilities commission in approximate amount at least $16,353,465.

"The grand aggregate assessment levy, therefore, for the current year, amounts to approximately $135,888,000, a net increase of $1,044,730 over last year.

Realty Shows Decrease.
"Real estate valuations fell off $96,475. This should not be regarded as a reflection of the present flourishing condition of Memphis realty. On the other hand the apparent slump is to be traced to average conditions prevailing prior to the signing of the armistice, coupled with the fact that comparatively few new buildings added for assessment purposes.

"Such properties as the municipal river and rail terminal and the site for the new postoffice, both now being exempt from taxation, also explains that local real estate has held its own, notwithstanding any apparent deficit.

"Personal property valuations show an increase of $905,108, explained by the presence of new financial concerns and banking institutions and to the location of new sources for application of the personal property assessment law.

"There has been an increase of $524,297 in the merchant's ad valorem tax. The record complete has been delivered to the city clerk. My attention has been called to an opinion to effect that the board of equalization shall review the valuations.

Cites Tax Law.

"The mayor and commissioners are herewith advised that while there is no personal objection on my part to any individual or set of individuals reviewing this, or any other set of assessments from this department, yet you are respectfully informed that I have been furnished with legal advice that any change made in the merchant's ad valorem valuation, as rendered, will be unlawful and void for the reason that the original act, as passed by the 1917 legislature, does not provide for a board of review.

"Furthermore, I have been informed, no county or city in the state has ever called upon a board of review to pass on merchant's ad valorem values and no board of equalizers in Memphis ever reviewed the work.

"The law as it has been interpreted to me, permits the merchant to assess himself by rendering his own return.
